Case No. 2:15-cv-09699-RGK-FFM
Judge: R. Gary Klausner

PLAINTIFF'S POSITION
REGARDING DEFENDANT'S REQUEST FOR CLARIFICATION AS
TO THE COURT'S ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS

Complaint Filed: December 17, 2015

Motion Hearing:

Date: February 29, 2016
Time: 9:00 am
Courtroom: 850
255 E. Temple, Los Angeles, CA 90012

1 Plaintiff agrees that there currently is a difference of opinion between the 2 parties as to the Court's Order on Defendants' Motions to Dismiss. Plaintiff of course
3 do not deny that the Court dismissed Plaintiff's RICO claims. The Court's Order does 4 not specify whether the dismissal is "with" or "without prejudice". Understandably, 5 that distinction is significant in that it directly impacts Plaintiff's options for next 6 steps.

7 To clarify the point, Plaintiff's counsel did phone the Court's clerk and was 8 informed that unless specifically stated to be "with prejudice" then all dismissals are 9 "without prejudice". As the Order does not indicate with or without prejudice
10 Plaintiff interpreted this to mean that the dismissal is without prejudice. As a courtesy 11 of course Plaintiff's counsel immediately contacted Defendant's counsel to inform 12 him of this information. Defendant's counsel does not agree with this position.

13 That the Court treats, or at least so Plaintiff's counsel was informed, 14 unspecified Orders of dismissal as "without prejudice" may be to comport with the 15 general philosophy consistent with Rule 15 that amendment should be freely or 16 liberally granted. This is actually consistent with the Isis Pharm., Inc. v. Santaris
17 Pharma A/S Corp., No. 3:11-CV-2214-GPC-KSC, 2014 WL 4793029 (S.D. Cal.
18 Sept. 25, 2014) cited by Defendant. The Isis Pharm. Court does indeed quote the 19 Fourth Circuit case McLean v. United States, 566 F3d 391, 396 (4th Cir. 2009)
20 regarding the issue of with prejudice for unspecific Orders. However the Isis Pharm.
21 Court then immediately in the same Order went on to grant leave to amend.

22 Significantly, this Court in its Order does not appear to indicate that amendment 23 would be futile or impossible. Rather, regarding the only two RICO elements to 24 which the Court issue, the Court seems to indicate that amendment may be possible.
25 Regarding the continuity element the Court opined:

26 Here, the allegations of continuity are entirely conclusory. Plaintiff alleges 27 that "Defendants specifically represented to Plaintiff's counsel that they 28

1 have been conducting business this way for over 30 years.” (Compl. ¶50,
 2 ECF No. 1.) Plaintiff, however, does not plead with particularity who made 3 these statements, when they were made, and the context in which they were 4 made. . . . As it stands, the Complaint merely alleges an isolated incident
 5 of apparent fraud. In order to sufficiently plead a continuing threat, Plaintiff 6 will need to allege, with particularly, more facts demonstrating that the 7 Defendants were participating in this scheme over a substantial period of 8 time.

9 Dkt. 36, pp. 13, 14. (emphasis added.) Such information regarding continuity can be 10 provided including without limitation the details of the phone call which as mentioned 11 in Plaintiff’s Opposition “took place on March 9, 2015 at 12:53 p.m.—of note the 12 email communication representing that Plaintiff’s truck has purportedly been sold to 13 JCB was sent by Cornerstone to Plaintiff’s counsel shortly before the call on March 9, 14 2105 at 10:35 a.m. (See Compl. Exhibit “2”).” (Dkt. 27, p. 9, fn. 3.) This phone call
 15 was between Plaintiff’s counsel Justin Harelik and Cornerstone Financial Services 16 prompted by the letter purportedly indicating that the truck was sold the same day it 17 was repossessed and during which Mr. Harelik was informed that Cornerstone had 18 been conducting its business this way, i.e. repossessing trucks and allegedly selling 19 them the same day for nearly thirty years.

20 As to proximate cause the Court indicated:

21 In the present case, Plaintiff has failed to adequately allege proximate
 22 cause. While Defendants’ alleged misconduct supposedly prevented 23 Plaintiff from proceeding with his Chapter 13 bankruptcy, it remains to be 24 seen whether, in the absence of such alleged interference, Plaintiff could 25 have successfully structured a reorganization plan and retained his vehicle.
 26 As currently pled, Plaintiff’s RICO claim suffers from a glaring gap in the 27 causal chain because he has not alleged sufficient facts to demonstrate that 28

1 Defendants' fraud directly caused his loss. Therefore, proximate cause is 2 not satisfied.

3 Dkt. 36, p. 15. (emphasis added.) However Plaintiff too believes this issue could be 4 amended or clarified to highlight the direct aspect of the proximate cause.
5 Significantly, the load hauling contract that Plaintiff lost was had in fact been 6 executed and was in place as of the date of Defendant's repossession and sham sale
7 of the truck. This contract was referenced in the Complaint and Cornerstone supplied
8 the actual contract in conjunction with its Motion. Under Bankruptcy Code upon 9 filing a petition for bankruptcy a repossessed vehicle become the property of the estate
10 and upon the estate has the immediate right to turnover or return of the vehicle.
11 Plaintiff did make a demand for turnover and since the sale was a sham, actually never 12 occurred then Defendant was supposed to have returned the truck. The sole and 13 exclusive aspect or issue of Plaintiff's Chapter 13 was the reorganization of the truck
14 debt. If Defendant had returned the truck as Defendant was obligated to do so Plaintiff 15 would have had the truck for which he was supposed to fulfill his obligations under 16 the hauling contract which was already in place. The hauling contract would have 17 provided Plaintiff substantial income per month, sufficient enough to pay off the 18 monthly requirements of any Chapter 13 reorganization plan. Indeed the hauling 19 contract was to earn Plaintiff roughly $450,000. However since Defendant did not 20 return the truck under the guise of the sham sale then Plaintiff not only lost his truck 21 and therefore lost the associated hauling contract.

22 While of course upon amendment Plaintiff would take care to more fully 23 address all of the Court's concerns, given the immediate time constraint of reply to 24 Defendant's papers requesting clarification, Plaintiff believes the above should 25 provide the Court with a fair amount of illumination as to the feasibility of 26 amendment.

27 Plaintiff respectfully joins in Defendant's request for clarification on the 28

1 Court's Order as to Defendants' Motions to Dismiss as to the issue of whether the 2 dismissal of Plaintiff's RICO claims was with prejudice or without prejudice.
3 However, Plaintiff of course would respectfully request that the Order be deemed 4 without prejudice and/or without prejudice with leave to amend.

5
6 Respectfully Submitted,
